

Moving the Needle

People with dementia have all the same feelings we do. Living with the losses of dementia often produces stressful feelings, like those appearing below on the left. Experiencing friendship and empathy can transform the way a person with dementia feels. When we are a Best Friend™, we can “move the needle” to more positive feelings, changing sadness to happiness, fear to security.

